Thank you to the real superheroes among us: our generous donors and dedicated volunteers.

Annual Report 2015

STORMS ARE NOTHING NEW to New Englanders, but in 2015 we had more than our fair share. It is impossible to look back on this year and not mention the epic snow storms that plagued us. They disrupted all of our lives and caused financial and physical hardship for many. But the snow didn’t stop our clients from reaching out for help and it didn’t stop our staff and volunteers from helping; when the roads were passable they were here serving and being served.

In spite of the storms, 2015 was an incredible year here at Interfaith Social Services. The support that we received from all of our donors and community partners was miraculous. Together we fed thousands of families, brought joy to hundreds of children, provided counseling to those with nowhere else to turn and prevented homelessness for many local residents. It was emotional to see so many outpourings of support throughout this year, but particularly so during the holiday season, as carload after carload of donated gifts arrived to uplift the children that we serve.

Our Gala in December yet again set a new fundraising record for our organization, and it couldn’t have happened at a more crucial time. A record-setting number of people came into our food pantry in January and two significant funders changed their guidelines to no longer support anti-hunger organizations. Thankfully we were prepared for these challenges and others. The community of volunteers and supporters who sustain our organization is incredible!

Thank you to everyone who has supported Interfaith this past year, and over the past sixty-eight years since we were founded. We truly are a community helping our neighbors in need.

Sincerely,

Donna Eliasson

SPECIAL THANKS TO OUR 2015 FEED THE HUNGRY GALA COMMITTEE
Ally Donnelly

Ally is familiar to most area residents from her work at the TV station NECN. But what most people don’t know is how much she does behind the camera to help South Shore residents who are struggling to provide basic necessities for their families.

Ally has participated in the Pan Mass Challenge in honor of children struggling with cancer. She encourages local businesses to join her in supporting families in need. She organizes clothing and Halloween costume drives for local children, she prepares bake sales, and she participates in Walkathons.

Since 2012 Ally has co-chaired Interfaith’s Feed the Hungry Gala committee. Her leadership has led to a 400 percent increase in funds raised through the Gala. The event now accounts for almost one-third of Interfaith’s total annual funding. Her efforts make it possible for Interfaith to provide food, mental health counseling and emergency assistance to thousands of local residents every year.

Ally Donnelly has been a part of the NECN team for over 10 years. She has received three local Emmy Awards, two regional Edward R. Murrow Awards and two Gabriel Awards in her career as a journalist, along with two Associated Press awards and a Freddie Award. In 2014, South Shore Living profiled Ally as one of the most influential women in the South Shore region.

Ally and her husband Patrick are proudly raising daughters Izzie and Lucy in Hingham, both of whom organize a bake sale each spring to benefit Interfaith Social Services.

Ally’s passionate investigative reporting and dedication to serving South Shore residents in need made her the obvious choice to receive this year’s Interfaith Social Services’ Community Hero of the Year award.

Each year Interfaith Social Services’ Community Hero of the Year Award is presented to individuals who inspire others through selfless service. Past recipients include Jennifer Reale, Cindy Lee, Ed Kelley, Paula Lombardo, Beverly Tangvik, Thomas F. Williams, Esq., Kris Larsen, Matti Lang, Jan Stewart, Mary Ann Walsh, Robert F. Taylor, Margaret Davidson and Andrew Scheele.

The Matti Lang Volunteer Hall of Fame is named after one of Interfaith’s most dedicated volunteers who gave decades of his life selflessly serving Interfaith’s clients.

The honor of being inducted into the Hall of Fame is bestowed upon those volunteers who have been serving within the organization regularly for at least one year. Their names are inscribed on a plaque which hangs in Interfaith’s foyer.

These individuals, from the following towns, were honored at this year’s induction ceremony:

- Auburndale: Jennifer Reale
- Boston: Bill Murphy and Beverly Tangvik
- Braintree: Martha Lewandowski
- Bridgewater: Margaret Wielhower
- Brockton: Bernard Dasilva
- Cohasset: Charlotte Bodell, Allison Corbett, Heather Hintlian Karlovits, Amanda Kennedy and Christina Weissensee
- Framingham: Julie Nations
- Hingham: Barbara Caron, Kevin Clow, Allison and Brian Joyce, Alexandra Maurer, Donna Mavromates, Daniele Serafini and Peter Wallace
- Milford: Michel Auda
- Milton: Christina Ferrera and Joanne Fisher
- Quincy: Cristiana Amara, Gabriel Arato, Margaret Donaher, Judy Howlett, Catherine Lane, Dolores MacMillan, Charlene Manning, Mary McLaughlin, Sheila Montgomery, Mary Parker, Barbara Pyne and Aggie White
- Scituate: Katie Catlender and Maura O’Brien
- Weymouth: Rhonda Callahan, Darcy Cordner, Charlene Feeley, Ruth Mullen and Dorothy Newell
Serving the South Shore since 1947, Interfaith’s roots of service and compassion are planted deep within the soil of our community. This year Interfaith’s Thrift Shop and Food Pantry programs celebrated their 40th anniversary. This legacy of service has been made possible by countless donors, volunteers and dedicated staff members over the years. We thought we’d take this opportunity to look back at almost seventy years of helping our neighbors in need...

IN THE MID-1940S, one of the largest employers in the greater Boston area was the Quincy shipyard, where many World War II warships were built. However, as the war drew to a close, so did the shipyard’s production, and over the course of two years thousands of employees were laid off, resulting in crises for many local families. Within their congregations local religious leaders saw the poverty and social problems that these struggling families were confronting. They wanted to do something more to help them. This desire resulted in the formation of what would come to be known as Interfaith Social Services. The group was initially called Protestant Community Services and was established in 1947 to help all Quincy families who had fallen on hard times. Congregations worked together providing families with emergency assistance and hope.

However, as the war drew to a close, so did the shipyard’s production, and over the course of two years thousands of employees were laid off, resulting in crises for many local families. Within their congregations local religious leaders saw the poverty and social problems that these struggling families were confronting. They wanted to do something more to help them. This desire resulted in the formation of what would come to be known as Interfaith Social Services. The group was initially called Protestant Community Services and was established in 1947 to help all Quincy families who had fallen on hard times. Congregations worked together providing families with emergency assistance and hope.

BY 1957 the organization had expanded its service area to include ten South Shore communities and changed its name to Protestant Social Service Bureau (PSSB).

THROUGHOUT THE 1970S, the Bureau operated various group homes for young men who were wards of the state. During this time period, the agency’s adoption program was created to help find homes for older children, sibling groups, and disabled children who desperately desired permanent, loving homes. A key component to working with this population was addressing their mental health needs and those of other community members. Although the program wouldn’t be named The New Directions Counseling Center until 1982, mental health counseling has always been a vital program within Interfaith Social Services since its inception.

1975 was an important year in Interfaith’s history. Facing pressure from a significant public funder, the organization was forced to choose between merging with a similar organization in Boston or losing a substantial amount of funding. The board of directors choose to forge their own path. That year they organized the first South Shore Walk fundraiser. They opened the Bureau Drawer Thrift Shop, and the Pantry Shelf emergency food program started serving clients for the first time. The pantry began in a 5-foot by 8-foot closet and was originally staffed with one volunteer.

Today, Interfaith’s Pantry Shelf food pantry is one of the largest emergency food programs in greater Boston. It is staffed by two part-time staff members and hundreds of other volunteers who distribute almost one million pounds of food to over 18,000 people annually.

THROUGHOUT THE 1980S, the HomeShare project matched single seniors living alone with persons seeking a room in... exchange for services, room and board. The organization opened several group homes for seniors during this time period to address the unmet regional need for senior housing.

In the late 1990s, the HomeSafe program was launched as a way to prevent homelessness and to provide emergency assistance to local families in need. The first Feed the Hungry Gala fundraiser was also held during this time period at the Company Theater in Norwell. Since then, the Gala has grown to become one of Interfaith’s most important fundraisers, as well as being one of the premiere social events for greater Boston and Massachusetts’ South Shore regions.

In 1998, Protestant Social Service Bureau changed their name to reflect the fact that its support, volunteers and staff were not affiliated with any faith-based institutions. The board of directors wanted to honor the organization’s roots in the faith community; as such they choose the name Interfaith Social Services. Operating as a nonreligious organization, the organization continued to pursue its mission of “strengthening family life and offering assistance to anyone in need.” That same year Interfaith’s various group homes closed, as affordable senior living options became available in the region.

In 1999, Interfaith’s Career Closet program opened to provide professional clothing to women reentering the workforce. Ten years later the program was expanded to serve male and female job seekers.

In 2000, the Food Pantry Easter Basket and Help for the Holidays adopt-a-family programs were created to assist food pantry clients who are unable to provide holiday gifts for their children. The seasonal initiatives have grown substantially over the past two decades. Each year Interfaith’s volunteers distribute 350 Easter Baskets, 300-plus Halloween costumes, and more than 700 backpacks full of school supplies to the children of food pantry clients. In addition, 800-plus households receive Thanksgiving meal baskets, and more than 600 children receive Christmas gifts.

In 2000, Interfaith’s adoption program was closed due to chronically delayed funding from the state.

In 2003, Interfaith purchased the 105 Adams Street building, which currently houses their offices, and consolidated all of the organization’s programs under one roof.

In 2009, in an effort to provide more fresh produce to food pantry clients, Interfaith launched the Harvest Helpers program. That year, staff and volunteers planted a garden at Interfaith’s offices and began encouraging the donation of fresh fruits and vegetables to the food pantry. The agencies plant gardens, raise vegetables and donate the produce to food pantry clients, and encourage community gardeners to do the same.
IN 2011, the Learning Pantry program was launched to educate food pantry clients about a variety of life skills, including financial literacy, nutrition and addiction recovery.

IN 2013, the HomeSafe Program launched an ongoing budget counseling initiative for housing assistance clients, and over 493 households were served by the new initiative that year.

THROUGH 2014 AND 2015, various building improvement projects were conducted at Interfaith’s offices, including the installation of a new roof and new windows, stucco resurfacing, new flooring for the Thrift Shop, extensive heating repairs, a new hot water heater and septic pump, as well as more refrigerators, freezers and shelving for the food pantry. Many of the improvements that have occurred over the past few years were made possible by funding from one of Interfaith’s strongest community partners, The Arbella Insurance Foundation.

Arbella’s commitment to community outreach has had a profound impact on Interfaith and our clients. These repairs and improvements to Interfaith’s facilities, along with the community’s ongoing donations of time and funding, will make it possible for Interfaith to continue serving clients for many years to come; just as we have for the past seven decades.
